THE LATE LORD PALMERSTON ON RUSSIA IN THE PACIFIC.

The discussions which are taking place about the injury that may be done to British commerce in the Pacific by Russian ernisers reminds me. save a writer in the Whitehall Review, of something that I heard related by the late Mr. Merivale. In 1855 Lord John Russell, immediately after becoming Colonial Socretary, went to attend the abortive Conference at Vienna and Lord Palmerston undertook the interim duties of the department. One day he appeared at the office, and sending for Mr. Marivale, the then Under, Secretary, asked for maps of the Russian possessions in the Parisle. When they were produced he placed his finger upon Petropunicvaky, and for about twenty minutes discoursed upon its present and future importance; and then; without transacting any Colonial business, went away, saying. "I'll look in upon you another day:" a promise which; although Lord John remained absent for many weeks, was never fulfilled. In showing so much interest in Russian movements in the Pacific, Lord Palmerston gave a proof of his sagacity; for intelligent Russians are more and more convinced that it is there. much more than in the Baltic or the Mediterto develop.

SMALL CHANGE: From the reign of Queen Elizabeth to that of Charles the Second, so much inconvenience was felt in trade for the want of small change, that the tradesmen and victualisrs in general -that is, all who pleased coined small money, or tokens, for the benefit and convenience of trade. This small money, halfnonce and farthings, was coined by the corporations of cities and boroughs, by severa of the companies there, and even by tradesmen in country villages. This affair of coining was managed with tolerable facility. At the borough of Chester, in Derbyshire, Mr. Edward Wood, and afterwards his son. others; and on their death, the dies and the press were found in the house. These Woods coined only halfpennies, and there were two sets of dies, one for the father, and the other. for the son's money. They were anothecaries, and the device was accordingly Apollo Opifer. The dies, consisting of an obverse and reverse, were welded on strong blocks of iron and being fixed in a very simple screw press, wrought by hand, in the manner of a capetern with four handles, many hundred of half pence might be coined in a very short time by two persons: one to ply the screw, and the other to take off the pieces as they were struck. This practice continued until the a sufficient sum of money for the purposes of
